This third document has all the posts that I've made more recently, and some older posts, that I couldn't fit in the original two documents due to exceeding the word limit. Here are the original two Google Documents and their archived versions:

"My Most Important Posts":
https://docs.google.com/document/d/167dYGh3pHwsjRPLWICSDDj7L42o7992AZuWiHMj74G4/edit?usp=drivesdk

[Internet Archive version]:
https://web.archive.org/web/20260411170709/https://docs.google.com/document/d/167dYGh3pHwsjRPLWICSDDj7L42o7992AZuWiHMj74G4/mobilebasic

[Archive.is link]: https://archive.ph/ybnVV

"My Most Important Posts (2)":
https://docs.google.com/document/d/1DQqt2adN8pixNNHe8XEDsSfiBsxrPGpG7obI6YRS4So/edit?usp=drivesdk

[Internet Archive version]:
https://web.archive.org/web/20260411162726/https://docs.google.com/document/d/1DQqt2adN8pixNNHe8XEDsSfiBsxrPGpG7obI6YRS4So/mobilebasic

[Archive.is link]: https://archive.is/hQ3Ln

"You're one of THOSE people aren't you?": NHI and Forcibly Humanizing Spirits Through Deception, Threats and Mockery":
https://www.reddit.com/r/EscapingPrisonPlanet/comments/1rc6ihj/youre_one_of_those_people_arent_you_nhi_and/

Last night I had a dream involving "The Grim Reaper" that made me think about something important involving humanity, I was inside a clinic like waiting area and some woman was talking to this black hooded man, he was wearing a hoodie and black pants, and she said something above the lines of "we can't let others know you're the grim reaper" and when I heard this I looked at the hooded man and I could saw his face. He had black hair, black eyes with small pure white irises, pale skin, and had no nose at all, it was purely flat where his nose/nostrils should've been and I think his face had two lines on it that reminded me of an android like design. I immediately took an interest in him and began asking him questions like "are there others like yourself, other reapers?" and he looked puzzled at me as I did this and when I told him I was a researcher of the paranormal and had experiences with humanoids before him so seeing him didn't bother me, I'll never forget his reply to me and it's actually what inspired me to make this post, he looked at me almost with disgust or a weirded out face and said "You're one of THOSE people aren't you?"

That reply stuck with me not only because it felt so disgusted with the fact that someone like me would take an interest in the supernatural but also because it felt like it was judging me for wanting to ascend past my human programming and learn about the higher knowledge that exists outside of Samsara. After this I asked him if reincarnation is real just to see what his answer would be and he said “short answer, yes”. I specifically asked him this question because even though I know reincarnation is real I wanted to see if this entity knew about it too just to see what it would say and if it said no then that would imply a lot of different things since this entity is allegedly a reaper type entity.

Some other stuff happened in my dream after this such as me being tested with other people inside this massive room where we had to pull out these shapes from these weird boxes in a sort of test which is similar to my other alien test dreams that I’ve talked about in the past but the main thing I want to focus on is that entity’s reaction to me being more knowledgeable on the metaphysical than most people. It reacted with disgust and was weirded out that I was able to not only recognize it but also be able to ask it certain questions that it didn’t even seem comfortable answering and refused to answer. In retrospect I should’ve asked him why his masters think it’s a good idea to keep pedophiles like Trump, Epstein and Prince Andrew alive for long amounts of time while all the young kind hearted people die young just to see what his honest reaction would be. I mean the answer’s obvious in that they want suffering to rule the world but I wanted to hear him scramble to tell me that it was some sort of “lesson” or “it’s just the natural order of things, good and evil” like every other Archon.

But this encounter really stuck with me because of the blatant subtle master-slave like attitude towards humans these entities share. Think about it, in many different encounters involving NHI they often condescend us and treat us like garbage while gaslighting us into thinking suffering and reincarnation and all this stuff is just the natural order and that we shouldn’t question anything and if people do question what they’re told then these entities immediately get hostile and like a narcissistic abuser they literally manipulate the witnesses into thinking basically “oh you’re just a simple human, you don’t know anything about the real world” which objectively isn’t true since none of us are humans and we’re all spirits inhabiting flesh vessels for short periods of time but the fact that they try so hard to humanize us when we question reality or their positions in our lives genuinely goes to show that like a master “disciplining” their cattle into being obedient, humans aren’t allowed to think critically about deeper issues without being told that they’re “wasting their time, they’re only human”, “just don’t think about it, enjoy life”, and made fun of afterwards.

It’s a similar thing with MIB encounters actually where sometimes the MIB basically say to the victims of their intrusions that “it’s good for your sake and the world’s” that they stop researching about UFOs and aliens and just live a “normal life” which this in itself is a massive red flag because why would benevolent entities keep pressuring us into “living a normal life” when we try to dig deeper into how reality operates and the entities that are abusing and torturing humanity? The MIB and other NHI essentially act as bullies who threaten us to never tell anyone about their bullying to others with even larger threats of violence and abuse which is exactly in line with the behavior of abusive narcissists where they think that they're better than you and condescend you any chance they get.

The NHI demonize critical thinking and different pathways than the norm by making them into jokes or just telling people they're wrong, which scares people away from them since the NHI in their eyes are "more knowledgeable" than us "lowly humans" who need to "learn more".

I remember when I was younger, and it still happens every now and then, that whenever someone condescendingly said something like "oh you're just human, you wouldn't be able to understand it" or "we're only human, we can only understand so much" when talking about much deeper, existential topics that I would genuinely get mad internally like being called "human" was an insult and in a weird way I still think it is when talking about this. It's the way NHI uses it that makes me think that "human" is almost like a slur or insult among at least some NHI which only proves even more that they don't have our best intentions in mind and view us like sheep to a slaughterhouse.

But like I said, none of us are human and yet they try so hard to humanize us like we have to force ourselves to play these roles because that's "the natural order" which it really isn't and only hurts us when we die and think of ourselves as just humans and get promptly sucked into the tunnel of light or get escorted by one of these psychopomp astral AI goons that are made to trick spirits into coming with them into the astral afterlife and or reincarnation tunnels of light.

So the only way to defeat that sort of programming is by literally dehumanizing yourself and saying things like "No, I'm not a human, I'm not a part of this matrix. I am an infinite spiritual being/aeon/buddha, this realm is pure illusion and only serves to entrap us in infinite cycles of reincarnation to harvest us eternally. I refuse to play this game anymore". Which is exactly what they don't want because you're not associating yourself with any species or character and instead are being true to who you really are and always have been which is an infinite and powerful Buddha/Aeon/God being of pure consciousness without form.

When I think about that "reaper" type entity that was weirded out by me I have to wonder, did it actually know that I was apart of the Prison Planet and Reincarnation Soul Trap community because if so then why did it act so annoyed that I was "one of THOSE people". Notice the emphasis on "those people" like they're the negative others and you shouldn't be like them like it was mocking me for researching the soul trap and what happens after death and that I should just be a good little "human" and just go into the tunnel of light just like everyone else.

Throughout so much paranormal literature, it's so apparent that humanity is blindfolded into accepting this false slave reality where everything is "as it should be" because all humans are to NHI are nothing more than energetic food and slave worshipers who they can do whatever they want to and get away it every time since there's no one to stop them from doing the most deplorable crimes imaginable to any of us. The real reason they want us living "normal lives" is because it gets our eyes off of them and we stop thinking of ways to escape their control system and sharing what they're doing to us to our fellow trapped spirits on this prison planet.

“Why the Affirmations of “Living Out of Spite” and “Human Nature” Are Coping Mechanisms”: https://www.reddit.com/r/ReincarnationTruth/comments/1rvyfoy/why_the_affirmations_of_living_out_of_spite_and/

I want to discuss two topics that’ve been bugging me awhile that connect with how people try to cope with living in this matrix reality and how they try to justify certain behaviors that aren’t beneficial for people and those two things are living out of “spite” and letting your “instincts” dictate your behavior towards others and yourself.

I’ve personally seen the whole “we gotta keep going, we need to keep living out of spite” mentality in certain communities that talk about the depressing state of affairs in the world and I have to say that this argument kind of falls apart for a lot of reasons. On a purely objective, logical level, there will always be evil. Life itself is intrinsically designed to guarantee harm and suffering to someone or something, life is a never-ending process of various levels of pain. This is observable in nature which we all are a part of and throughout history there have been many evil and corrupt people who constantly arise and brainwash the masses into following their footsteps and it’s always the same story: They rise, people get mad, they fall, repeat. Sometimes in dictatorships that isn’t what happens but still, there is a repeating process that is never-ending with minorities and those deemed “bad” by the states in which they are born in to fight “for what’s right” even though all that progress can easily be stripped by a corrupt politician or a new law, or something else.

I’m obviously not downplaying suffering as we all suffer and there are people right now who are suffering immensely right now like those in Palestine or developing nations but when you look at history and see the intrinsic nature of predator and prey in the animal and natural world, it starts becoming obvious that nothing really changes or if it does change, it can be easily set back to zero by our corrupt elites or a natural disaster or something else that disrupts the peace. It’s a script that involves “heroes” and “villains” and personally, I don’t want to play either part, I can feel empathy for those in need and raise awareness for those suffering but I don’t want to keep playing this never-ending game of “good vs evil” which is all nothing more than a staged play on a metaphysical level thanks to Archonic life scripts and the elites that run the world controlling how things go down.

Also “living out of spite” is a really bad excuse to keep living similarly to other excuses to keep living such as “the world is so beautiful bro”, “life is all about spreading love and joy man”, “life’s great when you find something to enjoy”, “you just need to find someone who cares about you, then life becomes bearable”, and other weak attempts to make someone enjoy living. It’s just a way to essentially make people “hate-live” as I’ll call it (you know hate-watching or hate-playing games or movies? It’s like that but for living life) where these people hate living but they stay out in public to spite those they don’t like which barely achieves anything other than an emotional release that the archons get to enjoy in the form of loosh.

That actually leads into my next topic on people saying “oh it’s just our nature to do certain things bro”. I’ve also seen this point a lot in online spaces when discussing certain things, particularly procreation and violent tendencies, and not only does this promote very materialistic and animal-minded behaviors but also it’s basically forcing this idea that just because we are in these human bodies that inherently means we have to have sex to create babies, we have to kill others to survive, we have to hurt things smaller than us because it’s just us growing out of it, etc.

It tells us that every negative or hedonistic aspect of the human mind is actually something that we should accept like for example I read this one comment on a post on this site that I’m not exaggerating, was saying that abusing animals is intrinsic in human nature and that young kids do it all the time. The thing with this is that it has some basis in reality in that with some kids they do hurt insects and animals when they’re younger out of no reason at all, which is actually a topic in itself as to why kids do that sort thing in an Archonic matrix system, but they try to use it as an argument that “it’s just in us bro, we are just a bunch of violent animals who can’t control ourselves bro” which is not only wrong but harmful as it leads to people giving into desires that they never even had in the first place because “it’s human nature”.

In fact another thing I saw on this site and on other sites is the phenomenon of people in bad moods and saying they hate something about society and then other commenters will be like “give into your hate. Fuck humanity” out of nowhere and on a metaphysical level I find it extremely suspicious that these people coincidentally just so happen to come out of the woodwork when a person is feeling down and more suggestive to outside influences. This ties in with the whole “human nature” thing because these people are literally giving into their hate and are blinded by pure emotions instead of logic and reason and they then try to paint it as logic and reason when really all it is is just hatred and misery behind a mask of intelligence.

Do we see the pattern here though? In both of these topics, outside people try to cope with living life purely on the basis of emotions that make them feel good about themselves instead of actually looking at the bigger picture and realizing the whole thing is a trick to keep baiting you into playing the game of life over and over again. They want you to have sex so you can create more babies, they want you to be “living life out of spite” so you don’t step back and realize that this game had happened before, they want you to give into these lower materialistic desires so you can keep feeding the loosh farm and the elites’ slaughterhouse where people die at their command everyday.

Just because we were programmed to do certain things or have done things in the past, doesn’t mean that we can’t change ourselves to be better. We can ascend past these primitive chains and finally start seeking knowledge and enlightenment instead of mindless procreation or getting too invested in this Truman Show esque reality.

“Archonic Abusive Parents”:
https://www.reddit.com/r/MatrixReality/comments/1thfr6e/archonic_abusive_parents/

This is something I’ve thought about more deeply as of late and that is the exact reasons behind souls being put into abusive home environments. We all know that one of the reasons is to obviously loosh harvest the kid’s suffering and trick them into thinking it’s a gift, experience or karmic retribution but I think there’s another reason why these archons love putting souls with abusers.

Statistically speaking, there are quite literally Millions of kids across the world getting abused as we speak; physically, emotionally, spiritually and sexually, and if we count every other decade before this one then those statistics skyrocket into literal billions of kids that have been abused and tortured throughout Earth’s history.

https://www.unicef.org/press-releases/nearly-400-million-young-children-worldwide-regularly-experience-violent-discipline

“Nearly 400 million children under 5 - or 6 in 10 children within that age group globally - regularly endure psychological aggression or physical punishment at home, according to new UNICEF estimates. Of them, around 330 million are punished by physical means.”

https://www.who.int/news-room/fact-sheets/detail/violence-against-children

“Globally, it is estimated that up to 1 billion children aged 2-17 years have experienced physical, sexual, or emotional violence or neglect in the past year.”

https://nichq.org/blog/bringing-trauma-forefront-early-childhood-systems/

“In the United States, 34.8 million children (ages 0-17)-nearly half of American children-are exposed to adverse childhood experiences (ACEs) that can severely harm their future health and well-being.”

As seen in pre-birth and Near Death Experiences, the archons force souls into inhabiting these lifetimes under the guise of “learning”, “karmic retribution”, “contracts/agreements” and other deceitful lies to get the soul accommodated to its hellish fate with a naive smile on its face, believing its for “the greater good”. I find it really interesting though that there are so many life scripts that specifically involve parents/elders abusing their kids. Why is this very specific set-up emulated billions of times across human history in varied formats like religious abuse, sexual abuse, physical abuse and emotional abuse?

Then I realized something, when you look at what happens when these people grow up, it’s almost like it’s a pre-programmed process due to how often these now grown up people act in their lives in regards to them questioning the system. 1.) They let their trauma consume them and it basically causes them to be forever stuck in this cycle of internal pain until the day they die, 2.) They get later coerced into worshiping a set of deities/or a single deity because “they help them deal with their trauma” and “make them feel loved”, or 3.) They completely leave spirituality behind either because the trauma they had was religiously affiliated or because they don’t have belief in any benevolent beings after what they’ve been through.

Looking at all three of these specific paths that most seem to go down in regards to how they deal with their trauma from childhood, the pattern of attachment to your lifetime currently is everpresent. Not to say this happens to everyone with a traumatic childhood, but when put into perspective it seems a bit too obvious that they’re doing this on purpose to make people lose focus on escaping the system entirely.

You see, trauma is a very massive attachment since it’s not only personal but also extremely emotional for the soul to process, not only producing mass amounts of loosh energy but also putting the soul on a lower level of consciousness in regards to enlightenment. This allows entities to not only take advantage of people in these states of mind but it also keeps them in place here since these traumatic events cause so much stress that the soul doesn’t even bother looking for a way out and instead wants to find comfort and safety. By traumatizing the soul in childhood and also suppressing their memories of before they entered that body, they make attachment to Samsara much easier while also opening the ISBE up to outside forces pretending to be loving.

Earth and other planets similar to it are essentially something worse than prisons, they’re basically mass production facilities to create legions of Stockholm Syndrome induced souls that are so broken beyond belief that they’ll follow their leaders at the slightest show of love and affection. This also ties in with ramped up instances of misanthropy since abusive environments also can lead to a person developing misanthropic thoughts which is exactly what these beings want since it makes them look like saviors and the good guys against the “evil humans”.

There’s also the fact that many abusive parents feel soulless or even demonic. A lot of abusive parents always have this specific vibe to them that just feels off and it also doesn’t help that some of them act in ways that are borderline inhuman like how some people say that their parents somehow knew about certain things that were never talked about before (mind reading) or how it sometimes feels like their parents are actively draining their energy the more they’re around them. Experiences like these are always something to take note of because of how often these abnormal behaviors keep being reported by those who have lived these types of lives but whenever people bring this sort of thing they’re always dismissed because “oh it was just your trauma making it scarier” or “oh, you’re just ascribing supernatural things to mentally ill people, you need to seek therapy” or some other weird excuse that just tries to downplay the outright ‘demonic’ vibes you get from your parents and other weird abnormal phenomena involving them.

I’m reminded of Kyle Odom when I bring this up since he talked about how the ‘Martians’ (Reptilians) try to pretend to be normal people but act in ways that intend to manipulate humans into doing certain actions like murder or school shootings, of course I don’t agree with everything he said but when I think of how many times someone snapped because they were being abused by their parents and took revenge on certain people or fell down extremist pipelines and think about the blatant scripting of certain horrible events by the archons, things start to line up pretty perfectly. Think about it, billions of kids get abused everyday and there are a handful that decide to take matters into their own hands, which causes more suffering and attachment to this realm not just for them but for other people as well.

I think a lot of these abusive parents are either straight up soulless NPCS that are serving a directive made up by the archons or are possessed by these beings in order to ensure that loosh is being created and that souls continue to stay attached to their sense of selves. I didn't used to believe in the existence of NPCs but when I began specifically thinking about this and the implications of it, I just couldn't really ignore that possibility anymore since it does feel like from a metaphysical perspective that these abusive parents are being factory produced to a certain degree due to how strangely some of them act and how exactly similar all of them are, like an invisible hivemind of some kind.

So in summary, I think that another reason why archons put spirits into these sort of lifetimes is to basically break them down until they no longer seek any form of true enlightenment and escape this matrix and instead falter into Samsaric habits that only seek to attach them more to this plane of existence and also make some of the souls they traumatized into weapons that only produce more loosh energy on the whole for others.

TL;DR: Abusive parents are Archonic traps to traumatize the Aeonic souls within the child vessels to try and stop them from reaching enlightenment and also to loosh harvest them ala spawncamping them.

"Abductee Gets Gutted and Has Organs Cloned While 'Being Happy' During Whole Experience (Love-Drugged)":
https://www.reddit.com/r/EscapeReincarnation/comments/1tujkt0/abductee_gets_gutted_and_has_organs_cloned_while/

https://web.archive.org/web/20250207072310/https://www.phantomsandmonsters.com/2019/09/abductee-gutted-by-alien-captorsbut.html

I found this case from a YouTube video compiling different 'high strangeness' cases from around the world (https://youtu.be/wIDd-BFUabA?si=QfsDTP98YsieO7Qw) and this one caught my attention since this case just like many others, reaffirms the fact that these aliens use mind control to sedate their victims into feeling blissfully happy and also that they take human genetic material to either use for cloning or for meat consumption.

The abductee in this scenario, “KE”, stated that in their abduction they were laying down on a surgical table on a UFO with 4 foot tall aliens with big heads and gangly long arms standing above their perfectly sliced open body that revealed all their organs.

“I looked down and they had opened up my skin from the top of my chest down to my crotch and, as far as I could see, all my organs were visible.”

This is where things get truly disturbing as not only was the witness sliced open, but these aliens were taking out each and every one of KE’s organs and putting them into a machine similar in appearance to a microwave that then duplicated said organs perfectly. All of this was happening while KE was completely sedated into feeling a sense of ‘happiness’ and “calmness” as they described while lying down and having their organs removed.

“I remember being happy with what was happening, just a strange calmness… They took out each of my organs one at a time and put them in a machine, that looked like a microwave. This machine produced a copy and then they would do another organ, one after the other, including my heart. I couldn’t understand how they could do all this and I was happy lying there.”

After the copying of KE’s organs was successful, all their organs were put back and one of the aliens sealed them back up with their finger like a laser and this is what KE recalls happening to them on this specific occasion. However it appears that this wasn’t their only contact with said beings as they report that on another occasion some UFOs came by them and started morphing into different shapes and the final shape was a love heart. It also appears that they've been manipulated further by these beings as they proclaim that this species is “friendly”.

“On a separate occasion the ships came and showed me signs by moving into shapes of objects we all know. The last object was a love heart. This species of aliens is friendly.”

This case is yet another example of why these aliens can not be trusted under any and all circumstances as they administered the ‘love-drug’ to the witness in a manner that completely brainwashed and manipulated them into a state of obedience just like in NDEs and OBEs with the infamous love bombing but also proceeded to clone all the victim’s organs for untold purposes just like in other abductions where these beings have been seen cloning people and organs.

The fact that KE said that this species is “friendly” not only because of the love heart appearing in that other instance of contact as a sign of two faced manipulation in order for KE to trust them but also because of other implied contacts that helped reinforce this false narrative is heartbreaking as this person is just yet another victim of the alien love-bite despite the obvious red flags being right in front of their face. They never got an answer as to why these beings needed to clone their organs and why that happy feeling even came over them in the first place when they should’ve been freaking out realistically, just another instance out of many of its kind where these NHI mind control and drug people with feelings of intense happiness, love and calm serenity in order for them to be more easily controllable and to become puppets to their overarching malevolent Archonic agenda.

It's kind of laughable that they came back to KE here and showed them a heart as a show of 'friendship', what kind of friendship involves stealing the other's organs and drugging them into compliance? As seen in other encounters, we can assume that they're using the organs they cloned here for either cloning or genetic manipulation or even that they're keeping it around for food since in certain alien encounters these beings do eat humans so it's not that much of a stretch that either these beings are going to feast on those organs personally or they're merely holding them for other alien races like the reptilians or mantids who have both been observed eating human meat.

"How Samsara Teaches Selfishness by Tempting You With Desires and Attachments": https://www.reddit.com/r/EscapingPrisonPlanet/comments/1ucdxgs/how_samsara_teaches_selfishness_by_tempting_you/

I want to talk about something that's been slightly bugging me for a long time now and I've slightly discussed this in the past on here but when it comes to thinking about other people's suffering here on this planet and telling others about your feelings towards that suffering, the 'solution' that many people suggest is to "Don't pay attention to it bro, just focus on yourself" or something similar to that where they basically say that because you aren't the one experiencing the suffering and pain first hand, that you should just block it out and ignore it in favor of continuing your life as normal.

But that's the thing however, once you recognize and empathize with those suffering, you can't unsee it and you'll always keep that in your memory and in fact once you dig deeper into that suffering it just opens up more existential questions and makes you realize that the life you've been living is in actuality a comforting lie built on the backs of suffering slaves and trauma victims. That's actually the very disconcerting thing about all this, it's the easy dismissal of other people's suffering and not even batting an eye to it whatsoever.

I think the most pivotal examples of this are the people who genuinely can't seem to empathize with others who are suffering in other countries that are doing way worse than theirs, it's like no matter how much video evidence, photographs, real life interviews, documented war crimes, and other blatant atrocious acts caught in 4K ultra HD, these people can't ever sympathize with them or even understand the veracity of the suffering they go through and from what I've seen, there are times where these people actually mock those that care about the suffering going on in these countries with stuff like "We have to help these countries who have no effect on ours bro!", "If it doesn't affect my job situation or rent then I don't care", and other extremely borderline sadistic and apathetic statements these NPCs have made and that's where I'm kind of getting with this.

I noticed that the people who say “Oh just focus on your life man” are typically the ones who act in ways that don’t question the systems in place, they can’t emphasize with people who are different than them, they follow group think philosophies where everything has to be what the majority believes, they don’t think about the deeper elements to life and society on the whole and they’re overall very surface level when it comes to practically everything about them, like all they care about is sex, romance, their jobs, the media they consume, and looking good to everyone else around them. It’s like they’re programmed to just be an NPC who reinforces the systems in place and punishes those that dare have basic empathy for others in need or who think deeper about the rotten nature of life and society than them.

That’s actually something I’ve noticed with this entire Samsaric realm to be frank, this false reality encourages you to be selfish. Even though we might say nice or accepting things towards those who are different or struggling in life, there’s always this backhanded fake element to it where we do it just for appearances to show others that we aren’t “psychopaths” by ‘caring about the little guy’ when in actuality they could give less of a shit about the homeless, abused, enslaved, disabled, discriminated, hungry, etc. In fact, I noticed that whenever someone does actually help out these groups of people in whatever they can, like giving a homeless person clothes and food and water for example, it’s like they get weirded out by those acts of kindness like the mere act of doing what you speak causes them to get uncomfortable almost.

I think that’s actually the major hint to understanding that these people are either possessed or are full on non-souled archonic NPCs because the way they act towards suffering is very strange and not normal in the slightest but these archons have established themselves in such high places of authority that it’s become normalized in society despite it not being normal at all. They try to direct people away from the suffering in the world and life itself and lure them down all these paths that cause attachment and desire like sex and partying and having kids and overindulging in fictional media as ways of distracting them from the truth under the guise of “it’s for your own good”. It’s the same sort of argument of “ignorance is bliss” where some try to argue that being ignorant of the darker truths of life makes life better for you even though it really doesn’t in retrospect and just keeps you in this eternal cycle of never questioning why things are so bad meanwhile bad things keep happening to you.

I understand that it is important to have relaxation and destress times in your life, I’m not saying that you have to constantly be there for everyone else and never take care of yourself but what I am saying is that whenever you try to look at all the suffering across Earth in all its shapes and sizes, these Agent Smiths walk in and tell you that that’s not what you’re supposed to be doing and try to direct you away from the truth of the matter in that life is nothing but suffering and the archons that made it that way want to keep it that way and I think that’s why there’s such a weird adverse reaction to those that help others out in an honest, genuine manner, these archons get angry when someone stops suffering because that loosh isn’t going anywhere and the suffering program gets halted which causes them to have to find another way to make that soul suffer since that source of pain is no longer available or weaker due to other souls helping each other.

That's also why humanity has been so isolated throughout its history in one way or another, it's that when no one is helping each other out due to whatever reason is at play, the easier the misery loosh is harvested but when someone actually decides to make a change and stop that loosh from being farmed, it messes with the harvesting process and the archons then have to send out these Agent Smith like NPCs who try to lure them away from helping those in need in favor for them getting loosh farmed instead. It's very reminiscent of Yeshua and Satan or Siddhartha and Mara where Satan/Mara try to lure Yeshua/Siddhartha away from their divine paths with all these luxuries and desires but Yeshua and Siddhartha reject those desires in favor of truth and knowledge.

When talking about suffering, it's like people get uncomfortable by it and try to shut down the conversation by calling you "overly political", "paranoid", "sensitive", "woke" and other things that I've personally seen when viewing various topics pertaining to human suffering or they'll "lightwash" it as I'll call it where they'll try and say that the suffering is a part of "God's plan" or in "Fate's hands" or that "they agreed to this in between lives" or whatever lie they can think of to comfort themselves so they don't have to think deeply about all that pain and misery anymore and continue with their life as if nothing happened.

"The Archonic Fixation on "Childlike Innocence":
https://www.reddit.com/r/ReincarnationTruth/comments/1uovua2/the_archonic_fixation_on_childlike_innocence/

https://youtu.be/hdXTCXlrDxk

I saved this video that I saw a long time ago on my recommendations by pure random chance about a man who said that he had a dream that the U.S. went to war with Iran and how he saw planes flying overhead and how he was able to fly in his dream because of "childlike faith". This video was posted 8 years ago before everything that has happened with the U.S. and Iran this year and it got me really thinking about the concept of "childlike behavior" being presented as something to strive for in many spiritual and even secular communities.

This concept of acting 'childlike' has actually been documented in numerous alien abductions, NDEs, OBEs, Psychedelic experiences, etc as being something that's imposed on the victims of these experiences where they're either taught directly by these entities that that's how they should act or they just get hit with the intense love-drug energy to the point where when they connect back to physical reality, they act more child-like, more suggestible, like they got reset to a more regressed state of mind.

In many religious and spiritual teachings, they often emphasize how we're all the "children" of all these different deities and how we all should just listen to them as one would with their parents or teachers. This all brings up the question of why are these Archonic entities so focused on brainwashing people to act more like children or at least more 'innocent' than how they acted before and I feel like it should be obvious if you've been in this field for long enough and that reason is because it not only regresses souls down to become much more suggestible but also it makes the energy/loosh they produce much more pure and tasty.

This is why you see so many childhood encounters with aliens, 'angels', ghosts, cryptids, 'demons', and other Archonic creatures, it's because they want to get human souls while they're young to either brainwash and manipulate them into becoming another propaganda machine for the matrix, harvest their emotional energies (worship, fear, sadness, anger, happiness, love, etc.) or do both simultaneously. Children and babies have much more purer energies despite them being the same reincarnated soul from other past lives because even though the spirit remains the same, similarly to a vehicle, the physical vessel has got new engines and gears and the energy released from them is pure because it's like a brand new product while an adult body is more of a used product and is less 'pure' in comparison but still delicious for the archons.

When looking at the physical world and especially the online world, you'll begin to notice something offputting about the way certain people act and that is that they act like children or teenagers despite them being full grown adults. What I mean by this is is that these people act in ways that are almost cartoon like or 'fake' if that makes any sense where they behave in ways that seem almost stereotypical like for example someone who acts like a jock sort of character or a punk type archetype where how they act feels disorienting from how 'normal people' act. I've personally had this happen in my life a couple of times where I encountered these 'stereotype people' that didn't feel real, that acted like cartoon characters and acted immaturely and every time it happened, it was always disturbing and I was constantly put off by those people.

In a retrospective lens, I genuinely think that these types of 'immature child-like' individuals are a subset of NPCs because a normal NPC while lacking in things a soulled individual has like the ability to think deeply about abstract and complex ideas and the refusal to follow corrupt authorities, they still act their age but do so in a way that is meant to manipulate or loosh off of soulled individuals so the archons can feast on them. But with the 'child-like' NPCs they act in ways that are immature and strange like for example with a normal NPC individual an opinion has to be based on what the majority thinks is correct and they will demonize those that don't have that viewpoint but with these 'stereotype people' that's amplified in a way where they essentially come off as childish or cartoonish but they do so in a way that attracts like minded individuals to them.

This all has got me thinking also about how some spiritual people talk about stuff like "The Inner Child" and just how much child-like imagery and symbolism has been inserted into various aspects of spirituality and religion. Why is everything connected to children? Why are kids constantly the center of attention and why is that "innocence" constantly promoted as something to work towards and the reason for all this is because most of the time children are prone to giving in to emotional responses rather than their own logical reasoning when in certain situations. If you notice with a lot of spiritual or religious people and even a lot of secular people, they tend to act in ways that are much more emotional rather than logical and they don't think critically about the various aspects in their lives but rather go off of what makes them feel good or bad in that moment.

By having a society full of grown up children that are suggestible to authority figures, the archons can easily manipulate them into doing whatever they want since they haven't developed the critical thinking skills that are necessary for growing up and I think that's a perfect analogy for all this, those that keep reincarnating and keep falling for the same tricks over and over again are like children while those that see everything for what it is, refuse to play the game and refuse to reincarnate have matured and grown up and realize that ultimately, childhood doesn't last forever.

Non-Prison Planet/Metaphysical Posts:

"Christianity can be used for good":
https://www.reddit.com/r/Antitheism/comments/1t2f179/christianity_can_be_used_for_good/

The amount of times I've heard this phrase or something similar to it like "religion, when used correctly, can be beneficial for humanity and society" makes me very uncomfortable and upset because of not only how widespread this type of thinking is but also how it reveals the ignorance that these people have towards religious teachings and scripture. Primarily I've heard it from Christian and general Abrahamic centered communities or people who were raised around those communities and it really does show.

How can these people still proclaim that "religion is good" when in Christianity there are multiple verses of Yahweh demanding genocide against people who angered him on the wrong day? How can anyone think that "God is good" when in the Quran it tells us that all humans and djinn are made for is to worship God (Surah Adh-Dhariyat 51:56) and nothing else and in the Bible it's mentioned that "heaven" is nothing but praising Yahweh for all eternity while also implying that your free will is stripped from you since there's allegedly "no sin" in heaven (something that's contradicted by the fall of angels and Lucifer btw). How can anyone look fondly at religion without thinking of the cosmic horror of knowing that imperfect, often violent creatures are not only judging you everyday of your life until you die but also created a world where suffering is a given from diseases to natural disasters and expect you to love it.

Religion at its core is about control, from karma to sin, the idea that you have to follow orders otherwise you'll be punished is present in all of them to some degree and I'm tired of pretending like they don't all do that to some degree because it feels like we have to pretend like these religions teach 'valuable lessons' so as to not anger all of the religious people on Earth that don't question what their books or scriptures tell them and just follow whatever is deemed 'divine' in the moment.

Since Christianity is the biggest religion on Earth thanks in part to colonialism and brainwashing, no one really questions why an ‘all loving’, ‘all powerful’ God needs to create an eternal torture chamber for everyone he disagrees with, no one questions the idea of ‘all knowing’ God already knowing the destinies of people’s souls and the horrifying implication that God made them to be damned so he could watch them suffer, no one questions all of the horrific atrocities that are seen in the Bible like the flood or the murders of the Egyptian firstborn in Exodus or the various genocides that Yahweh commands throughout the Old Testament, and no one questions the morality of all of this, just assuming that because Yahweh/Jesus is stated to be “love” and “divine” that that makes everything they do magically okay.

There’s also the fact that these religions scar the young in unimaginable ways that cause them to grow up developing intense fears of being judged harshly after death or angering the divine. There are so many stories of people developing trauma at a young age due to the fact that they were taught that Hell was a real place that people go to after they die, when a foundational principle of your religion is what causes kids to become scared of even living, that is a sign that that belief system is inherently evil. Not even just hell itself that scars people, there’s also stories of people becoming scared of heaven due to the fact that they were taught that all you do in heaven is worship God forever and do nothing else.

Kids aren’t dumb, they can rationalize things as any other human being can and they can see the problems with heaven and hell as mere ideas since there’s so many holes within these two concepts that the religion folds in on itself from the pressure of criticism. I myself didn’t agree with the concept of hell at a young age, I didn’t like the idea of people being tortured for certain reasons, in fact when I was very young I remember saying once that if I was God, I would help those people become better instead of torturing them. If a literal kindergartner has better morality and ethics than the ‘benevolent, omnipresent, all-loving, all-knowing” deity of everything, that’s a sign that the religion is morally bankrupt.

I also love how these types of people tend to gaslight you whenever you talk about criticisms regarding religious beliefs and teachings like “oh but it doesn’t actually say that in the scriptures”, “those are just human beings misunderstanding divine teachings”, “humans will do anything to twist religion for their own gain”, etc. etc. It really drives home the point that our traumas regarding what these religions teach and what we literally read for ourselves in these scriptures doesn’t matter at all in the slightest because it’s not what people want to hear. They want to hear what they've been brainwashed to listen to, they want to hear how great these religions can be while completely ignoring everything horrible about them.

The only reason why people think religion is good is because of the fact that there have been good religious people throughout history, but that doesn’t mean anything to what these religions teach. A religious person can be a good person while also following a corrupt and evil God purely due to the fact that people try to paint these horrid beliefs in new paint to try and make them less barbaric and ugly while also waving away anything truly awful in these texts as “translation errors”, “misinterpretations”, “human made errors”, “God being right about everything so it’s all perfectly fine”, etc. Being a good person doesn’t wave away from what it actually teaches in these religious texts, especially the Bible since that's what it's all literally founded upon.

Christianity and other religions shouldn't be used "for good", most of their beliefs are inherently barbaric, backwards and genuinely evil. These religions can never be truly used for good because their foundational teachings are so rotten and twisted that future generations have to keep making up excuses for the absolute hideousness of these texts.

People who say "[x religion] can be used for good" should read and understand what these religions teach before making these bold faced lies that unintentionally propagate even more suffering inflicted upon future generations due to the fact that people will continue to think that there's nothing wrong with teaching kids about these violent, merciless and unhinged deities that also are responsible for sending you to an afterlife of their choosing after you die. We need to stop scarring children and making it okay to scar them like this.

"Everything Wrong With "Fate" in Religion":
https://www.reddit.com/r/Antitheism/comments/1truap5/everything_wrong_with_fate_in_religion/

In practically most of the religions on Earth and throughout history, the concept of "fate" or destiny has been brought up over and over again as a universal law created by the divine in order for certain things to occur through their will. This is especially relevant in the most popular modern day religions of Christianity, Judaism and Islam who proclaim that not only does God know and see everything but that he has made everything and everyone in his image so everything that happens is according to his will.

But when this concept gets looked at more critically, not just in the Abrahamic religions but in general across all religions, this concept that seems comforting on the surface becomes way darker and reveals that no matter what, there can be no such thing as an "all loving" god or pantheon of "loving" gods that created everything since the implications involving fate are so disgusting and evil that it completely destroys any good faith one can have in any creator deity.

The most straightforward example of "fate" being an inherently evil concept in religion is that of child cruelty. When viewed in a "it had to happen/was meant to happen" lens, it really does not look good on whatever God made existence because the implication here goes as such: "It was fate that those kids got sex trafficked by Jeffrey Epstein, it had to happen because that's just destiny.", "The kids in Gaza had to die by getting blown apart by Israeli soldiers while watching their family members die horribly because that's what God intended.", "God made it so that you were assaulted as a child because that's just apart of his plan for you. You have to take the bad with the good.", "Children born in impoverished countries were meant to be born in impoverished countries because that's what the divine had planned for them", "That person who killed their own kids who were only 5 and 6 years old respectively was merely acting in accordance with how God had written them." Etc, etc, etc.

In the eyes of “fate”, things like child abuse and child torture are nothing more than a scripted event meant to happen to ultimately boost the egos of whatever deities are present in the creation of the universe because this concept is ultimately viewed as “divine” by practically all religious people without critical thought. I say that it boosts the ego of the deities present in whatever belief system one follows because when one dies and goes to “the good place” then it’s viewed as a blessing rather than what it actually is, emotional manipulation since they were the ones who put you in those terrible situations in the first place but act like they’re “saving” you from those situations when they literally already knew beforehand that you were going to be treated poorly by life itself, a life that they created for you.

This gets even worse if you take it one step further and suggest that whatever god you believe in, let’s go with the Abrahamic god Yahweh for now, is all knowing and thus already knows where exactly you’ll end up after you die, predestination. Now we have a massive problem now because in order to get into “the good place” you have to abide in accordance with the divine and follow the rules but if this God not only knows beforehand where you’ll go but also how you’ll behave and act in your life, then that implies that that person’s free will and by extension everyone else’s free will is nonexistent and is rigged from the start, making things not only inherently unfair but outright evil as this god is quite literally is sending people they created to “the bad place” while knowing that they will end up in the bad place beforehand and giving them no chance to really redeem themselves since their actions were scripted from the start.

Everything wrong with divine destiny as an idea can be summarized in two terms: emotional manipulation and narcissism. The divine in question create scenarios for humans to endure and when the time is right, they come in as “saviors” and “helpers” just doing the right thing through things like prayer or having them go to the “good place” where human souls can “finally rest after so much hardship” which in turn reveals that all they care about is being worshiped which across various religious scriptures like the Bible or Quran is seen as pretty much the only reason they created humanity.

That’s another thing too, if everything is predetermined then why even pray? Everything is set up already and as stated in scripture “God doesn’t change”, even though this gets contradicted in other verses where he does seem to change his mind on certain things, so what is exactly the point of praying to God even though everything's already decided and he doesn’t allegedly change? Why ask for help if the help has already been written down to maybe come or not before you were even born?

Fate from a religious perspective ultimately cements the objective fact that if an all powerful God created this universe then it is an inherently evil and apathetic God who forces their own creations to suffer and be tortured for their own gratification and when they die and get sent to their plane of existence they then manipulate the situation and make it all about themselves and how good they are that they “saved” said creations from suffering that they themselves tailored for the sole purpose of making people fall head over heels for them and twist their bad experiences into something that they should be grateful for because “it brought you closer to me”. This is perhaps the biggest take away one can get from most religions on Earth and that is that it remains the same that these religions that proclaim to “empower people” actually hinder humanity at large and only cause people to develop victim blaming mentalities towards others and themselves and blind obedience to ancient traditions that really shouldn’t be around anymore.